

Humility in Leadership

Humility is the ability to see yourself accurately.

Often time words can develop + or - connotations based on our interactions with them.

Being humbled can seem like its not a good thing (especially in our "Top Dog" world).

When you are advancing into higher leadership & gain more responsibility it is crucial to have an accurate view of oneself.

Positions of leadership do not define you, we enter in to those positions to help others not to boast about ourselves.

Humility is key in compassion & relationships. To know who you are, you have to deal with your yuck. This creates a natural compassion & empathy for the struggles of others.

When you have a healthy awareness of who you are (both your strengths & weaknesses), it allows you to be more aware of others.

What is the difference between humility & pride?

What is humility viewed as today?

What creates an accurate view of yourself?

Is there a difference between having pride & being prideful?

Why is humility essential in leadership?